

LABOUR'S DAY CELEBRATION AT APS, JAMMU CANTT

Hands that serve are holier than hands that pray

DIGNITY, is the word which stands at par with the humble word labour, be it physical or the work of minds. Martin Luther King, the man of his times, had even applauded labourers and their importance with mesmerizing words like, "pain-taking excellence".

Keeping the essence of nobleness and eminence in mind, labour's day was celebrated at Army Public School, Jammu Cantt on 1st of May 2024. The school gathered as a family in the assembly ground to acknowledge every bit of sweat, effort and hard work put into the frame-work of institution.

Surrounded by the variegated trees, swaying gently, the school stood together singing the songs of inclusivity and equality. The program began with some thought-provoking words by Ms. Manpreet Kour followed by quotes that enlightened the mind. The echoes of fairness, justness and equity could be heard, by every particle of the arena, when the dance drama took the stage. The day was garlanded with a hypnotic and determined play and dance performance emphasizing the value and need of accurate rights for the workers.

"Inclusivity is not discrete but it is fluid. It flows, encapsulating each and every one irrespective of their backgrounds, working styles and abilities." The pious day was at last concluded with these wise words of honourable Principal, Ms. Puneet Kour. She shared an amazing perspective of inclusion and marked everyone as a labour, working hard in their life, irrespective of position and grade of the job. The vision of her words was imbibed by everyone and will be carried along beyond the boundaries of time.

The day culminated with, a memorable moment of "merci bien" i.e thanksgiving. A token of gratitude was handed over by the students, to the most hardworking section of the school, setting a live example of "admiration of commitment and consistency".
