

THE BLISSFULL BOOK FAIR

Books take us to places, unimaginable and beyond horizons: To inculcate outstanding reading habits among students and encourage them to amplify the collection of their personal libraries, Army Public School, Jammu Cantt, organized a Book Fair on the Parent-Teacher Meeting (PTM). The event took place on 10th October in the school premises. The glistening and colored covers, rustling crisp pages and the fragrance of infinite knowledge, dispersed all around the institution.

The book fair aimed at providing students with an opportunity to explore a wide range of new authors and their work, varied genres, and brilliant excerpts. Students also purchased books of their choice at affordable prices, carrying home a friend for life.

Teachers and parents motivated the students to visit the fair, as it promised to be an enriching experience that fosters a lifelong love for reading. The fair offered books across various categories, catering to the different interests and reading levels of students.

The school is also looking forward to an active participation from students and parents alike, on 15 October 24 for middle and secondary students, as this event is not only about acquiring new books but also about nurturing a habit that contributes to the academic and personal growth of the students.

We hope this initiative will inspire a greater appreciation for literature and support our students in their educational journey. From reading the theories to grasping the knowledge and hence, assimilating the WISDOM.
